Flames of Love

Zümrüdüanka

Phoenix tells the story of an impossible love between Zümrüt, the most beautiful daughter of the struggling Kuloğlu family in a Nevşehir shantytown, and Serhat, the beloved son of the powerful Demirkan dynasty.

After her father was crippled in the salt mines, Zümrüt had to shoulder the family's burden, working in the same mines. Her beauty secretly captured the heart of Adil Demirkan, her wealthy employer. Too fearful of rejection, Adil never revealed his feelings—until Zümrüt's ambitious mother Ülfet, desperate to escape poverty, urged him to act. Defying his family's disapproval, Adil finally proposed marriage, and a wedding was arranged.

But on the wedding night, everything was shattered. Serhat Demirkan, long believed to be a fallen soldier and mourned for years by both his family and Zümrüt, suddenly returned alive. His reappearance threw Zümrüt into turmoil—caught between Adil's determination, her mother's relentless ambition, the Demirkan family's fierce opposition, and the love of her life, Serhat.

That's My Life

O Hayat Benim

“That’s My Life” is the original story of “Adela,” a Romanian phenomenon in 2022. Bahar has a modest existence in Istanbul with her adoptive parents, Nuran and Ilyas, and her horrible, jealous sister, Efsun. Money is so tight that she has to give up school and work in a cake shop. Unbeknownst to her, Bahar is the secret daughter of a rich businessman, Mehmet Emir, and a wealthy young woman who sadly died in childbirth. This woman’s father, Bahar’s real grandfather, was against the union; he ensured the pregnancy was hidden from Mehmet and gave the baby to his servants to raise. However, he is racked with guilt and plans to tell Mehmet Emir everything—but not before an accident takes his life. Knowing what was about to happen, Nuran and Ilyas hide his body in the garden and set their own wicked plan in motion—they present Efsun as Mehmet’s long-lost daughter instead. Will Bahar and Mehmet ever be reunited, and will her adoptive family pay for their duplicity?

Woman

Kadın

Bahar is a young widow struggling to raise her two children alone after the untimely death of her husband. Living in a poor neighborhood, she faces daily hardships, poverty, illness, and social pressure, but her unwavering love for her children gives her the strength to keep going. Every day is a new battle for survival, and Bahar carries the weight of both mother and father on her shoulders. Just as she starts to find a rhythm in her difficult life, her past returns to haunt her. The reappearance of the mother who abandoned her and a sister who betrayed her shakes Bahar's already fragile world. When she discovers clues suggesting that her late husband Sarp might still be alive, everything she thought she knew begins to unravel. For Bahar, life becomes more than a struggle to survive, it becomes a quest for truth, justice, and the possibility of love once more. Woman is the emotional journey of a woman who reclaims her identity and battles against all odds, not just for herself, but for the future of her children. It is a powerful story of resilience, motherhood, and rediscovering one's own voice.

No 309

In a posthumous video, a rich old man speaks to his family, who watches him in tears while secretly wondering who will inherit his fortune. He declares: "My dear grandsons... Erol and Onur... whichever of you gets married and has a child before the other will receive my entire share in the company, which is worth 600 million Turkish Lira..." otherwise known as big money! Desperate to get their hands on the cash, their mothers, Betül and Yıldız, rush to set up blind dates for their sons. Forced by his mother, Onur goes to his blind date, where he meets Lale, who is actually there for her own blind date with a young doctor (also named Onur!). Mistaking each other for their expected dates, they start to chat. As a result of Erol drugging their drinks, Onur and Lale get drunk and have fun all night long, eventually falling asleep in room No. 309 of a hotel. In the morning, unable to remember anything about the crazy night, they part ways, agreeing never to see each other again. However, three months later, Lale discovers she is pregnant. When Onur's grandmother hears the news, she declares that they are obliged to marry. What will this mean for Erol?

Forbidden Fruit

Yasak Elma

Yıldız and Zeynep are two sisters who are very close but have very different characters and life goals. Zeynep is a girl who strictly adheres to her ethical values, aims to have a successful career, and strives for it; whereas Yıldız believes that she deserves more and considers happiness to be a marriage with a rich man who would save her from her low-income life. Yıldız's life is about to take a new turn when she meets Ender Argun. Yıldız recognizes Ender from the weekly tabloids, envies her and the life she leads, and dreams of becoming the queen of Istanbul just like her. Ender's aim is to divorce her husband, Halit, without losing her position within Istanbul's high-society circle as well as her financial status. She knows she cannot receive a fortune during their divorce, so she comes up with a plan to set him up with a girl and consequently blame him for infidelity, which would get her high compensation in court. The girl she's looking for is none other than Yıldız. However, Yıldız betrays Ender and exposes her plan. When Halit learns the truth, he divorces Ender, leaving her penniless and discredited. After their divorce, Yıldız and Halit get married. This is the beginning of an endless war between Ender and Yıldız, which will continue for six seasons.

Deeply

İlk ve Son

Deniz and Barış once shared a passionate love story. Years later, they cross paths again, and memories from their intense past resurface. As they reconnect, they revisit the ups and downs of their relationship, recalling moments of joy and heartache. Every conversation brings old wounds and unresolved emotions back to the surface. The story shifts between past and present, showing how love can be tested by time. Misunderstandings, ambitions, and personal insecurities have played crucial roles in shaping their journey. Although Deniz and Barış have changed over the years, the core of their connection remains strong. As they reflect on the times they shared, they realize how much they themselves have evolved. The story questions whether true love can endure the passage of time and personal transformation. Facing their lingering emotions, they must make a choice: to rekindle their bond or finally part ways with peace. Their journey captures the bittersweet beauty of first and last loves, portraying the complexities of human emotions. "Deeply" is a reflection on the endurance of love, the inevitability of change, and the importance of acceptance. Through Deniz and Barış's emotional reconnection, the story offers a touching exploration of whether love can truly survive beyond time and through personal growth.

Emergency Love

Acil Aşk Aranıyor

Sinan is a reserved and disciplined young doctor working in the hectic emergency room of a hospital in Istanbul. He lives a quiet life, far from chaos or surprises—until one early morning, a loud commotion wakes him. A spirited and slightly clumsy woman named Nisan is moving into the apartment just below his. To his shock, he later discovers she's also the new assistant doctor at his hospital. Thrown together by coincidence, Sinan and Nisan are forced into daily interactions. Their personalities clash—his calm versus her chaos—but a subtle chemistry begins to grow. Though Sinan is drawn to Nisan's warmth and charm, their constant misunderstandings and stubborn pride keep their emotions buried. The tension between them rises as they navigate both the pressure of the ER and their conflicting feelings. Just as they begin to lower their guards and open their hearts, a hidden truth from the past surfaces—a secret with the power to shatter their fragile connection and unravel everything they've built. In a world full of emergencies, the most urgent case might just be the one beating inside their hearts.

In Spite of Love

İnadına Aşk

Men and women can be stubborn, but love often proves to be even more relentless. In Inadına Aşk, the sparks begin to fly when Defne, a spirited young woman from a traditional Black Sea family, lands a job at Aras Technology. There, she meets her polar opposite—Yalın, the charming yet arrogant CEO known for his womanizing ways. From their very first encounter, Defne and Yalın are like oil and water, constantly butting heads in a workplace charged with tension, mischief, and undeniable chemistry. Their feud turns into a fierce game of wits, each trying to outsmart the other while hiding the growing attraction they refuse to admit. But the situation takes a wild turn when Defne's overprotective and hot-headed brother, Çınar, storms into the picture to defend his sister's honor. Instead of conflict, though, fate has other plans—Çınar unexpectedly falls for Yeşim, Yalın's free-spirited and intelligent sister. As two love stories unfold against the backdrop of corporate chaos and family traditions, In Spite of Love blends humor, romance, and fiery confrontations. What starts as a battle of pride and prejudice soon evolves into something much deeper, proving that even the most stubborn hearts can be softened by love.

City of Secrets

Kayıt Dışı

Ali Kemal Ateş is a complex, troubled, yet charismatic man who operates under the radar, using covert methods to deliver his own unique brand of justice. Living among Istanbul's elite, he splits his time between his uncompromising work, handling all manner of legal and illegal problems for high-class clients, and his family—his wife Esra, their two teenage children, and his siblings, whom he has cared for his entire life. He's respected as a man who can keep a secret. But no one knows his biggest secret: he's an undercover government agent. Now, he's using all his skills to expose the most ruthless crime lord Istanbul has ever seen—Ekrem Tanöz. An unchecked Ekrem is a danger to the country, and the government's strategy to take him down revolves around one man: Ali Kemal Ateş. It's the most perilous mission of his career, and it becomes infinitely more complicated when he meets and falls in love with Zeynep, an idealistic doctor—and Ekrem's daughter.

Shattered Lives

Candan Öte

“Shattered Lives” follows the emotional journey of four fractured siblings—Nihan, Engin, Görkem, and Gülen—each burdened by the lasting wounds of a broken home. Years after their parents’ painful divorce, they live separate lives, shaped by different upbringings and unresolved pain. But when two unexpected love stories begin to unfold—Engin’s quiet affection for the strong-willed Figen and Kaan’s surprising romantic interest in Gülen—their long-buried emotions rise to the surface. Tensions flare, old scars reopen, and questions from the past demand answers. As relationships deepen and conflicts intensify, the siblings are forced to confront their childhood traumas, family resentments, and the roles they’ve been cast into. Through these trials, they begin to rediscover each other—not just as individuals with shared blood, but as people capable of healing together. “Shattered Lives” is a heartfelt exploration of family, love, and the unbreakable bonds between siblings. It asks whether forgiveness can truly mend what was once shattered, and reminds us that when the world falls apart, the first hand reaching out is often family—because no matter how far we drift, family remains the only constant in a sea of change.

Pars Narco-Terror

Pars Narkoterör

Anatomy of a Betrayal is a story of dirty money earned from drugs and the love between a Kurdish woman and a Circassian man, despite their different ethnic backgrounds. Istanbul Narcotics Chief Officer Şamil Baturay catches a drug baron on the verge of death during a routine drug operation. Following this, he travels to Van—an eastern province near the Iranian border—for a family visit with his work partner, who is also his fiancée, Züluf. While in Van, Şamil takes part in a drug operation led by his brother, a major in the Turkish Army. During this operation, they capture several terrorists smuggling heroin from Iran into Turkey. The very next day, Şamil's brother is killed by a sniper in an ambush while transporting the seized drugs. Although devastated by his brother's death, Şamil quickly begins investigating the ambush to find those responsible. Back in Istanbul, as he delves deeper into his investigation, he discovers that these two seemingly separate incidents in opposite corners of Turkey might be connected. A new “dust-line” is being established by drug barons, stretching from Istanbul to Iran and from Van to Berlin. Matters become even more complicated when Şamil realizes that his fiancée's family in Van might have ties to this emerging drug network.

The Karadag Family

Karadağlar

The Karadağ family lives in a village divided by wealth and power, where honor and betrayal go hand in hand. At the center stands Halit Karadağ, a ruthless and vulgar man obsessed with money and women, indifferent to the sons he scattered across the country to be raised by others. His eldest, Gülali, is a broken man—drowning in alcohol and gambling, yet hopelessly in love with the town's schoolteacher. Kadir, his middle son, is gentle, devout, and respected, clinging to hope for a quiet life with his love, Zuhar—but even that depends on the unreliable Gülali's help. Selahattin, the youngest, returns to the village as a lawyer, carrying a sharp mind and a calm rage that quietly stirs the fragile balance of the family. But everything begins to unravel with the arrival of Gülhayat, a stunning and mysterious woman who once fled the village in disgrace. Now she's back, and she's out for blood—holding Halit responsible for her father's death. In a world where vengeance burns hotter than love, and loyalty is tested at every turn, the Karadağ family must face the past they tried to bury—before it destroys them all.

Prisoners' Wives

Görüş Günü Kadınları

Prisoners' Wives follows the emotional journeys of three very different women whose lives collide in the visiting room of a prison. Gülay, a modest woman shaken by the news that her husband has been charged with murder, clings to the hope of his innocence. Her world is turned upside down when she meets Süreyya, a once-wealthy socialite whose husband is serving time for drug trafficking. Süreyya believes her family is financially secure—until their fortune crumbles and she finds herself struggling to survive. Then there's Zehra, a mother torn between discipline and regret. Hoping to scare her rebellious son straight, she calls the police after finding a gun in his room, only to see him wrongly accused of murder. As these women begin to cross paths during their prison visits, an unlikely bond forms between them. Though their lives are filled with fear, shame, and uncertainty, their shared pain gives way to solidarity and unexpected strength. Prisoners' Wives is a moving story about resilience, guilt, and the ties that form when everything else falls apart—a story that shows that even in the darkest places, connection can be a lifeline.

Let's Break Up

N'olur Ayrılalım

Ulaş Vardar has an unusual curse—or gift. Every woman he breaks up with ends up marrying someone else shortly afterward. Known among his friends as a modern-day “lucky charm” for lovelorn women, Ulaş lives a solitary life, convinced that love just isn't for him. Everything changes when his unlucky pattern catches the attention of a sly TV producer, Turgay, who turns Ulaş's love life into a reality show without his full consent. Suddenly, Ulaş becomes an overnight sensation, the man every woman wants to date... and leave. Azize, an idealistic and fiery young woman, becomes part of this whirlwind by accident. When she agrees to date Ulaş as part of the show, she expects a quick and painless exit. But Ulaş is different—genuine, sensitive, and hiding more pain than he lets on. As their paths intertwine, both are forced to question whether fate is something to accept—or to fight against. Amid staged dates, real emotions, public scrutiny, and secret motives, Ulaş and Azize must navigate a bizarre romance that began as a lie but might end in something real. A modern love story about second chances, heartbreak, and the absurdity of finding love in the spotlight.

Ana: You Are in my DNA

Ana Mi-ai fost scrisa

Ana is a fiercely determined young woman raised in a foster home, where the only true family she's ever known is Mama Lena, the devoted social worker who took her in. Now in the final year of her master's degree in journalism, Ana juggles her studies with event hostess work to make ends meet. With her earnings, she takes a DNA test in hopes of uncovering her origins—and finds far more than she ever expected. Tracing the clues, Ana uncovers a dark secret: a baby trafficking ring that sold unwanted children for international adoption. She learns that she was meant to be one of them, but the operation was exposed by police before her adoption could happen. Driven by a hunger for truth and justice, Ana begins investigating the ring, determined to reveal those responsible. But her search takes a dangerous turn when she discovers a painful link between the case and the man she loves. Now, Ana must make an impossible choice: expose the truth and rise to journalistic fame, or protect her heart and risk burying a story that could change everything. Torn between love and justice, Ana's next move could cost her everything.

Tycoon

Tajkun

At the center of the story stands Vladan Simonovic, a powerful Serbian tycoon, wealthy and influential, yet widely despised by the public for the fortune he amassed during the turbulent 1990s through questionable means. An attack on Vladan disrupts his seemingly untouchable world. An unknown assailant shoots at him, and more by reflex than conscious thought, his son Bojan jumps to shield him, taking a bullet instead. The assassin escapes, leaving behind confusion and fear. Determined to uncover who targeted him, Vladan initiates a private investigation, refusing to rely on official authorities. As the investigation unfolds, it opens a Pandora's box of buried secrets about Vladan's business dealings and private life. Every revelation brings deeper conflicts, threatening the stability of his mighty empire. The line between loyalty and betrayal becomes dangerously thin as Vladan struggles to stay one step ahead of enemies hiding in the shadows. He must navigate a labyrinth of old enemies, hidden motives, and personal vendettas. "Tycoon" is a tense and gripping story about power, corruption, and the dangerous cost of past sins. As Vladan's carefully constructed world starts to crumble, he faces the ultimate question: how to protect everything he has built when he cannot even trust those closest to him?

The Well

Bunar

The Well is an existential story—a search for deeper meaning, a quest to answer the question of why we exist in this world. The main protagonist, philosophy professor Radomir Pavlović, is on a journey to find this meaning. He is at the peak of his powers and at the beginning of a long road. He is young enough, in his forties by Selimović's standards, yet not old enough to fully grasp what he will encounter on his path. He is involved in everything, yet not fully committed to anything. Alienated from everyone, even from his native region of Šumadija—where the story takes place—or at least that's what he believes. "These are the forties. It's a bad period because you are still young enough to have desires, yet old enough to realize you cannot fulfill them. Ten years more or less, and everything would be fine," said Meša Selimović, one of the greatest authors of Yugoslav literature. Radomir is 45, and he's nowhere. At the beginning of our story, we see him as the most handsome, intelligent, eloquent, and successful professor—adored by the media and the author of a popular book. But one event changes everything, and his life falls apart overnight. He returns to his childhood home in his hometown, in the heart of Karađorđević's Serbia, which is no longer as he remembers it. There are returns that don't help us find ourselves; instead, they keep us apart. Sometimes we choose them, sometimes they take us by surprise, or sometimes we have no choice at all, and they lead us down roads we cannot foresee. We follow Radomir on his journey as he encounters people who are surprised, forgotten, or entirely new to him. As is often the case, each encounter brings inevitable change.

Double Bliss

Çifte Saadet

Perihan and Metin, both born and raised in the conservative city of Konya, have shared a deep bond since childhood. Their friendship, full of innocence and warmth, blossomed over time into a strong and loving marriage. Together, they built a beautiful life, raising three children and running a small grocery store side by side. Their happiness seemed simple yet complete. However, fate intervenes when Perihan travels to Bursa to attend a close friend's wedding. Metin, unable to leave their store unattended, stays behind. During her solo journey, tragedy strikes: the bus Perihan is traveling on veers off the road and crashes into a ravine. There are no survivors. Devastated, Metin and the family desperately search for her, clinging to hope, but after days of heartbreaking effort, it becomes clear that Perihan has perished. Her loss leaves an unbearable void, changing Metin's life forever. "Double Bliss" is a poignant story about love, loss, and the unforgiving hand of destiny. It explores the fragility of happiness and the suddenness with which life can alter without warning. Through Metin's grief, the narrative touches on the enduring power of love and the silent strength needed to accept the pain of an unwritten future shaped by irreversible loss.

The murder of Tigar, known as the most powerful and influential mafia boss in this part of Europe, has sent shockwaves through the Serbian underworld, shaking it to its very core. His sudden and brutal death has created a massive power vacuum that many ambitious and ruthless figures are eager to fill. The old rules no longer apply. The game is back on, fiercer and deadlier than ever before. Alliances are quickly forming and dissolving, betrayals are lurking around every corner, and trust is a luxury that no one can afford anymore. Everyone, from the seasoned kingpins to the lowest street hustlers, wants their piece of the pie. And they are willing to stop at absolutely nothing, no matter how bloody or merciless to claim it. Amidst this brutal scramble for dominance, on the very fringes of this cutthroat world, two unlikely players are just beginning their journey: Shock and Pasha. These two provincial petty thieves, neither particularly successful nor well-respected, have always dreamed of a bigger life beyond their modest, dead-end criminal activities. Now, for the first time, they see an opportunity to rise. Their ascent, however, will not be easy. It will be riddled with danger, betrayal, and sacrifices they never anticipated. Yet the allure of power, wealth, and respect is too strong to resist. This is the beginning of their path, their struggle, and ultimately, their story.

Binbir Gece

Şehrazat is a talented architect and widowed mother desperate to save her young son, Kaan, who suffers from leukemia. Facing astronomical medical costs for a life-saving treatment and finding no support from her estranged in-laws, she turns to her wealthy boss, Onur, as a last resort. Onur secretly admires Şehrazat and agrees to lend her the money, but under a shocking condition: she must spend one night with him. Heartbroken yet determined to save her child, Şehrazat makes the painful choice to accept Onur's indecent proposal. After that fateful night, both their lives change. Onur is filled with deep remorse and realizes he has fallen deeply in love with Şehrazat, while she struggles with anger and shame. Determined to earn her forgiveness, Onur pursues her sincerely, and in time Şehrazat sees a gentler side of him. They fall in love and become engaged, though Onur's mother initially disapproves of Şehrazat due to class differences and fears of scandal. When a jealous friend exposes the truth about the night Şehrazat spent with Onur, the couple's fragile trust is shattered and they separate in heartbreak. Yet ultimately their love proves stronger than pride and fear. Onur and Şehrazat reconcile at last and finally marry, overcoming past mistakes and lingering family objections. They emerge from these trials with a deeper understanding and begin a new life together, raising Kaan in a home safe and filled with love and trust.

The Cop and The Thief

Hırsız Polis

Mavi is a young woman forced into a life of crime in Istanbul to support her family after her father abandons them. She joins a car-theft ring led by a ruthless gangster, Aksak, and shoulders the burden of caring for her siblings and her brother's children. Çınar is a dedicated police detective, driven by a childhood trauma to pursue justice relentlessly. One day, Mavi and Çınar meet by pure chance, neither knowing the other's true identity. Warm-hearted and loyal to her loved ones, Mavi captivates Çınar, and she cannot help falling for his kindness despite her efforts to keep her distance. A tender romance blossoms between them, both believing they have found true love. However, their happiness is shattered when Çınar discovers Mavi is part of the very car-theft gang he's been assigned to bust. Mavi, in turn, learns that the man she loves is the police officer determined to catch her crew. The revelation forces them into an agonizing dilemma between duty and passion. Aksak, who secretly loves Mavi and has a dangerous hold over her, complicates matters further by targeting Çınar. Facing betrayal, violence, and the law itself, Mavi and Çınar struggle to protect each other. Ultimately they confront Aksak and make painful sacrifices. Mavi earns a chance at redemption, and Çınar learns compassion can temper justice. Against all odds, they fight for a future together, proving that love can bridge even the widest divide between a thief and a police officer.

Knife Edge

Bıçak Sırtı

Ali is a man who spends ten years in prison for a crime he did not commit - the murder of his pregnant wife. Upon release, he is determined to uncover the truth and reclaim the life that was stolen from him. Orhan is an aristocrat fiercely proud of his Ottoman heritage. Years earlier, through illicit means, Orhan took custody of an infant boy and now raises the child as his own, believing the boy is his biological son. Orhan's young wife, Nisan, lives in a gilded cage of a marriage, devoting herself to the little boy they are raising while longing for love and freedom. Fate intertwines the lives of Ali, Orhan, and Nisan. Ali gradually discovers that Orhan's beloved son is actually his child - the baby he thought he lost. Nisan finds herself drawn to Ali's warmth and integrity, feelings she never experienced with her distant husband. As forbidden love blossoms between Ali and Nisan, a series of betrayals and revelations threatens to destroy Orhan's carefully constructed world. Orhan's obsession with holding on to his "son" and preserving his noble family name drives him to desperate lengths to keep the truth buried. When the truth finally comes to light, Ali fights to clear his name and reclaim his son, and Nisan must choose between her duty and her heart. Ultimately, love and truth prevail. Ali is exonerated and reunites with his son, and Nisan follows her heart. Their courage and honesty prove stronger than the lies that kept them apart, leading to redemption and a chance to start anew after years on the knife's edge.

The Girl I Loved

Bir Çocuk Sevdim

Mine is a dreamy, romantic young woman from a conservative middle-class family in Istanbul. She falls deeply in love with Sinan, a college graduate from a wealthy family, and they pursue a secret relationship. When Mine becomes pregnant, their happy romance takes a drastic turn. Upon learning of the pregnancy, Sinan's disapproving family sends him abroad for graduate studies without telling him that Mine is expecting his child. Heartbroken and facing her own family's outrage, Mine is confined at home by her strict father, Turan, who is determined to preserve the family's honor and demands to know who the baby's father is. Desperate to save his daughter from disgrace, Turan's boss Timur - a wealthy, kind widower - offers an unexpected solution. He proposes to marry Mine in name only and claim her baby as his own, shielding her from scandal. With no other way out, Mine reluctantly agrees and enters into an arranged marriage with Timur. After she gives birth to a baby boy, their marriage of convenience slowly evolves into genuine affection. Timur's gentle support and generosity earn Mine's trust, and she finds stability and respect as his wife. Just as Mine begins to rebuild her life, Sinan returns from abroad and discovers he has a child, throwing everyone into turmoil. Now Mine must choose between her first love and the man who stood by her during her darkest hour. In the end, compassion and honesty prevail. Mine fights for a future where her son can grow up in a loving family without shame. She makes peace with her past and follows her heart, which leads to forgiveness between the families. "The Girl I Loved" ends with Mine determining the best life for her child - one built on trust, understanding, and the enduring love that has grown from so much pain.

Dear Family

Canım Ailem

Samim is a 45-year-old bachelor who has spent his life carefree at sea, avoiding responsibility. That changes when his sister and brother-in-law die suddenly in a car accident, leaving him the only guardian of their three children. Unprepared for parenthood, Samim moves into a close-knit Istanbul neighborhood with his orphaned nieces and nephew. By fate, the house he rents is directly across from Meliha – the fiancée he abandoned twenty years ago. Meliha, who never married after their broken engagement, is furious to see Samim again and doubts he can care for anyone but himself. As Samim bumbles through cooking, school runs, and bedtime stories, he gradually bonds with the kids and tries to earn Meliha's forgiveness. Moving in with Samim is his best friend Ali, a younger shipmate who comes to Istanbul chasing his own romantic dream. Ali falls in love with a cheerful local woman, Seyhan, even as his old flame Ahsen reappears, creating a comedic love triangle that entangles the neighborhood. Amid the chaos of three grieving kids acting out, Meliha's sharp-tongued scolding, and Ali's romantic misadventures, the makeshift family finds moments of warmth and humor. Over time, Samim grows from a fun-loving uncle into a devoted father figure, and Meliha begins to see the kind heart beneath his clumsiness. Ali, meanwhile, sorts out his feelings and learns what – and who – truly matters to him. In the end, love and laughter heal old wounds. Samim earns back Meliha's trust and rekindles their long-lost love as he proves he can be the rock for his nieces and nephew. Ali chooses the right woman and ends his tug-of-war between past and present. The household that once was in turmoil becomes a true home filled with affection, shared meals, and second chances – a beloved family that came together by fate and stayed together by love.

Grand Bazaar

Kapalı Çarşı

In the bustling Grand Bazaar of Istanbul, three down-on-their-luck friends – Cemal, Mahmut, and Arda – dream of a way out of their endless struggle with debt and bad luck. They get by working in a carpet shop, but life seems to pass them by. Everything changes when they cross paths with Diyar, a young woman fresh from her village, and a streetwise orphan girl named Zeze, whose tiny nimble fingers make her a gifted carpet weaver. Together, this unlikely group hatches an ambitious plan: to weave a “miracle carpet,” the world’s thinnest and most exquisite rug, and sell it for a fortune. Pouring their hopes into this secret project, the friends train Zeze to knot impossibly fine threads while Diyar and the men contribute traditional skills and unwavering determination. Day by day, in a hidden corner of the bazaar, the miraculous carpet takes shape and the four companions form a surrogate family, sharing laughter, meals, and dreams of the prosperity that awaits once the carpet is complete. At last, after months of meticulous work, the dazzling carpet is finished and it seems their prayers will be answered. But just as their dream is within reach, fate deals a bitter blow – a sudden tragedy threatens to snatch everything away. In the wake of heartbreak, Cemal, Mahmut, Arda, Diyar, and little Zeze come to realize that the true magic wasn’t the carpet after all, but the friendship, hope, and sense of purpose they found in each other. Though they must face loss and disappointment, their bond emerges unbroken. In a poignant conclusion, the friends carry on with newfound resilience, knowing that their unity and love – the real miracle of the Grand Bazaar – will guide them through whatever lies ahead.

Love and Punishment

Aşk ve Ceza

Yasemin's idyllic life is upended a week before her wedding when she discovers her fiancé's betrayal. In shock, she flees Istanbul for Bodrum, where one reckless night she seeks solace in the arms of a stranger. That stranger is Savaş, a modern-minded businessman from a powerful Kurdish clan in eastern Turkey, visiting Bodrum after his brother's traditional wedding. Yasemin and Savaş share a passionate one-night stand, not even knowing each other's names. The next morning, ashamed and heartbroken, Yasemin leaves without a trace. Soon after, Savaş is thrust into family duty when his father and brother die in an accident, making him the head of the conservative Baldar family. He faces pressure to marry his late brother's wife, Çiçek, to honor custom, and to continue the family's shadowy business dealings - all against his progressive ideals. Meanwhile, Yasemin returns to Istanbul and discovers she is pregnant from that fateful night. She chooses to keep the baby, a boy she names Ömer, raising him as a single mother in secret. Fate brings Yasemin and Savaş together again through a business project in Istanbul. They feel an immediate connection and fall deeply in love, unaware of their past link. Their romance must withstand immense challenges: Yasemin hides Ömer's parentage, and Savaş's formidable mother insists he marry Çiçek to uphold tradition. When Savaş eventually learns that Ömer is his son, it ignites a fierce conflict within the family. Savaş defies his mother and centuries-old traditions, determined to be with Yasemin and claim his child. Yasemin, in turn, bravely faces the judgment of Savaş's clan and society's scorn as an unwed mother. In the end, their love triumphs over vengeance and social norms. Savaş breaks the cycle of "love and punishment" by choosing a future with Yasemin and Ömer, and the Baldar family must accept this new path. United as a family at last, Yasemin and Savaş prove that their bond - built on honesty, courage, and devotion - can overcome even the harshest challenges of culture and fate.

Forbidden

Yasak

Set in the opulent world of late Ottoman Istanbul, "Forbidden" tells a scandalous tale of passion across class lines. Saïd (Sai) Bey is a wealthy, respected patriarch who has lived a quiet widower's life since his wife's death, focusing on raising his children and maintaining his status. That serenity is shattered when he becomes captivated by Calibe, a strikingly beautiful young woman from a humble background. Calibe is the daughter of a minor civil servant and has grown up knowing hardship. When Sai Bey offers her a place in his mansion - and eventually his hand in marriage - she enters a life of luxury she could only dream of. Istanbul society gossips about the union between the middle-aged aristocrat and the poor, enchanting girl, but Sai Bey ignores the whispers, indulging Calibe's every wish. Yet behind the gilded doors of the mansion, longing and loneliness simmer. Calibe, though grateful for comfort and status, finds herself isolated in a loveless marriage with a much older man. She is drawn to the household's charming young secretary, Nejat, who treats her with a warmth and familiarity that Sai Bey does not. As days pass, Calibe and Nejat fall into a forbidden romance, meeting in secret amidst the lavish halls. Their illicit passion grows, even as guilt and fear of discovery weigh on Calibe. Sai Bey's family begins to suspect that the young "sultan" of the house has given her heart elsewhere. The tension builds until Sai Bey finally uncovers the betrayal. The discovery is explosive: honor is tarnished and lives are upended. In a confrontation echoing the famous forbidden love stories of the era, the consequences prove devastating. The series climaxes in tragedy as Calibe faces the ruinous outcome of defying the rules of her society and household. "Forbidden" unfolds as a cautionary tale about desire and ambition in an era of strict moral codes. In the end, the forbidden affair exacts a heavy price: Sai Bey is left heartbroken and disgraced, Nejat is banished, and Calibe's fate becomes a grim lesson that in her world, passion and betrayal do not go unpunished. The final scene closes on an air of regret and lost innocence, as the once-grand mansion falls silent in the wake of scandal - a home destroyed by the very forbidden love that it harbored.

Our Aunt

Bizim Yenge

Newlyweds Filiz and Bahri start their married life with a daring decision – they elope against Filiz’s strict family’s wishes. Eager to finally have a home of her own and be a devoted wife, Filiz arrives in Istanbul ready to embrace her dreams. However, a huge surprise awaits her: Bahri, a humble jet-taxi (motorcycle taxi) driver, is the eldest of nine brothers, and his eight younger siblings all live under the same roof! Instead of the quiet love nest she imagined, Filiz becomes “bizim yenge” (our sister-in-law) to a household of eight unruly brothers-in-law, each with different antics and problems. Suddenly, this traditional “good family girl” finds herself managing a boisterous all-male household and playing peacemaker among Bahri’s mischievous brothers. While Bahri works long hours, Filiz cooks endless meals, breaks up squabbles, and tries to impose order on chaos – all while earning the respect of the boys who initially doubt her. From helping one brother with school issues to finding another a job and mediating teen heartaches, Filiz becomes the glue holding the family together. Her patience and warmth gradually win over even the most stubborn brother, and they come to adore her as a maternal figure they never had. Yet challenges persist: Bahri’s widowed father periodically interferes, testing Filiz’s authority, and Filiz’s own parents remain distant, hurt by the elopement. Through comedic misunderstandings and heartfelt family moments, Filiz transforms from a nervous new bride into the beloved backbone of the household. In time, Bahri’s brothers thrive under her care – the eldest finds the courage to marry, the youngest improves in school – and Bahri realizes he has given his siblings not just a yenge but a loving surrogate mother. The once-chaotic home is filled with unity, laughter, and appreciation for the woman who turned a motley group of brothers into a true family. Filiz and Bahri’s love only grows stronger as they navigate married life amid this lively extended family, proving that with patience, humor, and a big heart, even the craziest household can become a happy home.

Between Us

Aramızda Kalsın

Yadigar is a 30-year-old housewife and mother of two living in Gaziantep whose life is upended on her 12th wedding anniversary. She discovers that her husband, Halil, has been unfaithful. Devastated by this betrayal, Yadigar grabs her son and daughter and leaves that very day in search of a new beginning. With no money or support, she heads to Istanbul, the only clue guiding her being an old letter from her late mother. The letter leads Yadigar to the doorstep of a distant relative: her mother's milk-sister, Hüsne, who runs a modest kebab restaurant with her kind-hearted husband, Bahattin, and their own adult children. Taking Yadigar and the kids "for now," Hüsne quickly becomes a comedic but caring aunt figure. She hides the truth about Yadigar's situation from prying neighbors by pretending Yadigar is just visiting. In truth, Hüsne fears gossip and isn't sure if timid Yadigar can fit into their bustling household. As days turn to weeks, Yadigar adjusts to city life with wide-eyed amazement and stumbles her way into helping at the family restaurant. At first, every task she touches - from waitressing to cooking - results in amusing disaster, earning scolding from Hüsne and giggles from Hüsne's bold teenage daughter. Meanwhile, Bahattin tries to mediate with warmth, and Hüsne's son Civan, a talented chef returning from Italy, arrives and becomes an unexpected confidant to Yadigar. Amid the daily humor (like mis-delivered kebab orders and culture clashes), genuine bonds form. Yadigar's children flourish under the noisy love of this new family, and Yadigar slowly regains her confidence. She even starts to smile again, catching the attention of Civan, who finds himself drawn to her gentle resilience. But just as Yadigar finds a semblance of happiness, Halil, her repentant husband, arrives in Istanbul determined to take his family back. In a dramatic showdown, Yadigar must finally speak up for herself. With encouragement from Hüsne and Bahattin - and surprising support from her children - Yadigar stands firm against Halil's pleas. She decides that the loving, if chaotic, environment she's found is better for her and the kids than a broken marriage. In the end, Halil leaves, and Yadigar remains in Istanbul with her new extended family. By the finale, the kebab restaurant is thriving with Yadigar and her kids as permanent members of the household. Hüsne's once-grudging heart has softened, and Civan's quiet affection hints at a hopeful future for Yadigar. The series concludes on a heartfelt note: around a crowded dinner table, Yadigar realizes she hasn't just found refuge - she's found a true home, and a family bound not by blood but by love and acceptance.

The Season Of Rain

Yağmur Zamani

Firat is a wealthy nightclub owner in Istanbul who appears to have it all – a successful business, a luxurious lifestyle – but privately struggles to raise his four children alone after the tragic death of his wife. Juggling late- night work and parenting has made him stern and emotionally distant, especially with his youngest, five-year- old Naz, who has grown willful and troubled since her mother’s passing. Enter Eylül, a gentle young woman who grew up in an orphanage and has forged a life through hard work and optimism despite never knowing a family of her own. Eylül is hired as the live-in nanny for Firat’s children. She immediately faces the chaos of a motherless household: teenage angst from eldest son Ege, quiet sorrow from middle daughter Aslı, and little Naz’s defiant misbehavior. Though inexperienced, Eylül approaches the family with patience, warmth, and a sincere smile that begins to thaw everyone’s hearts. At first, Firat is skeptical of Eylül’s unorthodox, affectionate methods and maintains a cold, authoritative front. But he gradually notices how Naz lights up around “Miss Eylül,” how Aslı confides in her, and how even rebellious Ege seeks her advice. The household brightens under Eylül’s nurturing care – laughter and piano music replace gloom. Over time, Firat and Eylül grow closer as well. Firat finds himself drawn to Eylül’s kindness and inner strength, and Eylül sees past Firat’s gruff exterior to the devoted father desperately trying to hold his family together. As they collaborate to help Naz overcome a health scare and guide Ege through a school crisis, their bond deepens into love. However, obstacles arise: Firat’s sophisticated business colleague Ceyda tries to undermine Eylül, and Firat himself struggles with guilt over moving on from his late wife. A misunderstanding, fueled by Ceyda’s scheming, leads to Eylül leaving the house in tears one rainy night. In the final episodes – during a downpour symbolic of the “rainy times” they face – Firat realizes how incomplete life is without Eylül’s light. He rushes to find her and brings her back, apologizing and confessing his love in a heartfelt embrace witnessed by the cheering children. In the end, Firat and Eylül marry in a joyful, intimate ceremony at home surrounded by the children. The series closes with the once-fractured family united around Eylül, the rain having passed and given way to sunshine. Firat’s family has finally found healing and love again – proof that after the stormiest times, new blossoms can grow.

Lovebiz

Gönül İşleri

Three sisters – Servet, Saadet, and Sevda – navigate the tumultuous waters of love and family in this heartfelt drama set in modern Istanbul. After their mother’s sudden departure from the family, the sisters are left to fend for themselves alongside their endearing but hapless father, Muzaffer. Servet, the eldest, has always been the “strong one.” She married into wealth and appears to have a perfect life, but secretly suffers in a cold marriage. She yearns for the passion she sacrificed for security, and wrestles with unfulfilled dreams of motherhood. Saadet, the middle sister, is kind and traditional – engaged to a man she loves deeply, she obsesses over planning the perfect wedding. But when she is unexpectedly jilted at the altar, Saadet’s faith in love is shattered. This humiliation forces her to rediscover her own strength and independence. Sevda, the youngest, is a free spirit chasing fantasies of fairy-tale romance. She falls in love easily – and often unwisely – which leads to a string of comic mishaps and heartbreaks. Each sister faces her own romantic trials: Servet enters into an affair with a sincere shopkeeper who truly adores her, forcing her to choose between duty and desire. Heartbroken Saadet catches the eye of Yilmaz, a warm-hearted divorcee who patiently teaches her to trust again. And Sevda meets Bedir, a handsome mechanic from a lower class, sparking a star-crossed love that tests her ideals against her father’s disapproval of their class difference. Throughout their individual journeys, the sisters lean on one another. They gather in their late mother’s old dress shop – now run by Servet – to share tears, advice, and laughter over cups of tea. Their different personalities clash at times, but ultimately their bond proves unshakeable. With Muzaffer’s bumbling but well-meaning support, the sisters confront meddling in-laws, financial troubles, and big secrets (including a revelation about their mother’s departure) together. In the end, all three find that love takes many forms and seldom goes according to plan. Servet leaves her loveless marriage and bravely starts over with the man who values her. Saadet opens her heart to Yilmaz and finds happiness in an unexpected second chance at love. Sevda defies prejudice and family expectations to be with Bedir, learning that real love might be less glamorous but far more genuine than her daydreams. The final scene shows the sisters at a humble family celebration, each with her chosen partner. Their father Muzaffer beams with pride as Servet, Saadet, and Sevda dance together – three women who have endured heartbreak and rivalry but come out stronger, their hearts full of love for each other and the lives they have built.

Waves - Crossroads

Bodrum Masalı

The Ergüven family's glamorous life in Istanbul crumbles overnight, forcing them to start anew in the coastal town of Bodrum. Evren Ergüven is a proud, ambitious hotel tycoon who loses his fortune and properties after a series of bad investments and betrayals by a secret mistress. When Evren's empire collapses, he and his family must leave behind their mansions and sports cars and retreat to Bodrum, where the only assets left are an old family summer house and half-ownership of a small, rundown hotel. Evren's elegant wife, Yıldız, once a socialite, steels herself to hold the family together as they adjust to living modestly year-round in the vacation town they once only visited in summers. Their two teenage children, Ateş and Su, struggle to adapt from elite private schools to local Bodrum life. Ateş, the son, is hot-headed and initially resentful of his parents for the downfall; he goes from being a rich kid to working odd jobs and attending a public school, but soon learns responsibility and humility. Su, the daughter, is sweet but naïve; she flourishes in Bodrum's friendly environment, finding romance with a sincere local boy and true friends who don't care about money. Amid the upheaval, Yıldız encounters an old flame, Faryalı, who co-owns the small hotel with the family. Faryalı is Bodrum-born and knows the value of a simple, honest life; he helps the Ergüvens navigate their new reality and has lingering feelings for Yıldız from years past, creating subtle romantic tension. Meanwhile, Evren's past misdeeds catch up: his former mistress, who also moved to Bodrum, schemes to win him back and sabotage Yıldız. The local community is skeptical of the Ergüvens at first, but the family gradually earns respect by working hard - Yıldız cooks and serves guests at the hotel, Ateş gives sailing lessons to tourists, Su helps with cleaning rooms after school. The small hotel blossoms under their care and Faryalı's guidance, symbolizing the family's rebirth. There are dramatic twists - an old rival attempts a hostile takeover of the hotel, secrets about Evren's debts come to light - but the family faces them united. Through heartbreaks, culture shock, and personal growth, each member of the Ergüven family finds a new sense of purpose in Bodrum. Evren transforms from an arrogant businessman into a humbler man who prioritizes family over pride. Yıldız rekindles her independent spirit and possibly a second-chance romance with Faryalı. Ateş and Su, once spoiled and superficial, mature into compassionate young adults shaped by love and hard work. In the finale, the Ergüvens stand together on the Bodrum shore at sunset by their now-thriving boutique hotel. They have less wealth, but more happiness and peace than ever before.

Tatar Ramazan

Tatar Ramazan

Ramazan, nicknamed "Tatar Ramazan," is a tough, righteous blacksmith in 1950s Anatolia who becomes a legend standing up to injustice. When a greedy agha (landowner) tries to seize his family's land, Ramazan fights back and, in the struggle, the agha's son is killed. Framed for murder and sentenced to prison for life, Ramazan enters the harsh world of a remote penal colony already notorious for its brutal inmates and corrupt guards. Inside the prison, Ramazan refuses to bow down to the established order run by cruel gang leader Kirmastılı and his cronies who terrorize weaker prisoners with the guards' tacit approval. On his first day, Ramazan makes a bold example by protecting a frail inmate from a beating, immediately drawing the ire of Kirmastılı. Through a series of explosive showdowns, Ramazan uses his wits and fearless brawling skills to challenge the prison's tyrants. The other prisoners, long oppressed, rally quietly behind him. He earns respect by insisting on fairness and defending the downtrodden, including the kindly old teacher whom everyone calls "Beyefendi" and young apprentices thrown in jail for petty crimes. The prison director and guards try to break Ramazan's spirit through solitary confinement and torture, but Tatar Ramazan stands unbroken, repeating his motto: "As long as there is injustice, I will fight it." Beyond the prison walls, Ramazan's beloved Süreyya waits for him. Before his imprisonment, Ramazan and Süreyya were deeply in love and planning a life together. After Ramazan was jailed, Süreyya discovered she was pregnant with his child. She faces her own struggle outside - ostracism from society and pressure from Ramazan's enemies - yet she remains loyal, writing letters he rarely receives. Inside, those letters (when they reach him) and the dream of reuniting with Süreyya and their child give Ramazan strength to endure. Over time, Ramazan's crusade for justice sparks hope among the inmates and even changes some of the staff's hearts. He organizes a peaceful strike to demand better conditions. Clashes escalate until a large prison riot breaks out - a pivotal confrontation between Ramazan and Kirmastılı's gang. In a dramatic fight in the prison courtyard, Ramazan defeats Kirmastılı, ending his reign of terror. Wounded but victorious, Ramazan faces punishment for the riot, yet public pressure (thanks to stories smuggled out by the teacher) forces authorities to re-examine his case. In the final episodes, evidence of Ramazan's wrongful conviction emerges, and he is finally exonerated. Ramazan walks free to find Süreyya and the son he has never met waiting at the prison gates. "Tatar Ramazan" ends on an emotional high note as Ramazan lifts his little boy into his arms and embraces Süreyya. His journey - from a village blacksmith to a prisoner to a folk hero - comes full circle. He returns to his hometown with his family, determined to forge a just life with the same unwavering integrity that carried him through his darkest days. The legend of Tatar Ramazan lives on as a symbol of courage against oppression, reminding everyone that one man can make a difference by never surrendering his principles.

Cemil is a humble literature teacher who has devoted his life to caring for his younger sister, Ayşe, who is gravely ill with kidney disease. With their parents gone, Cemil's world revolves around keeping Ayşe alive – he works extra jobs to afford her dialysis and is desperate to find a matching kidney donor in time. Despite their hardships in a poor neighborhood of Istanbul, Cemil remains gentle and kind, hiding his own loneliness and dreams. In stark contrast, Ümit is a spirited woman from an upper-crust family, engaged to a wealthy suitor and living in a world of privilege that has left her feeling empty and controlled. One fateful night, Ümit is in a severe car accident and rushed to the hospital in critical condition, in urgent need of a rare blood type. By chance, Cemil is at the same hospital (for his sister's treatment) and discovers he is a matching donor. Without hesitation, he donates blood and saves Ümit's life. Ümit recovers, eager to thank the stranger whose blood runs in her veins. When she meets Cemil, she is struck by his selflessness and warmth. Ümit finds herself drawn to the modest teacher in a way she never felt for her fiancé. The feeling is mutual – Cemil is captivated by Ümit's sincerity beneath her upscale exterior. As Ümit spends time in Cemil's modest neighborhood to get to know him and Ayşe, she experiences genuine family warmth and purpose for the first time, helping Cemil tutor local children and even accompanying Ayşe to treatments. Their two worlds could not be more different, and gossip starts when Ümit quietly breaks off her engagement and continues seeing Cemil. Ümit's elitist parents are scandalized that she's abandoned her wealthy fiancé for a poor man and pressure her to return. Meanwhile, Ayşe's condition worsens, and time to find a kidney is running out. Ümit stands firmly by Cemil's side, helping organize a donor drive and using her family's connections to widen the search. Just as hope dims, a compatible donor is found – Ümit's own estranged uncle volunteers after hearing of the story. Ayşe receives the transplant that will save her life. In the aftermath, Cemil and Ümit realize how entwined their hearts have become, having weathered this trial hand-in-hand. But Ümit's parents give an ultimatum: if she marries Cemil, they will disown her. In a heartfelt climax, Ümit publicly chooses Cemil, declaring she'd rather live a honest life in "dark red" (the color of blood and sacrifice) than an empty one in gold. Touched by their daughter's conviction and remembering Cemil's heroism, her parents slowly relent. The story concludes with Cemil and Ümit marrying in a simple, joyful ceremony in the neighborhood, attended by people from both social spheres. Ayşe stands beside them as maid of honor, healthy and beaming. In "Dark Red", their love – born of sacrifice and compassion – triumphs over class barriers.

Ayten, once known as the most beautiful girl in town, turns down the marriage proposal of the wealthy and influential Kemal. Instead, she chooses to marry Hikmet, a poor but kind-hearted man whom she truly loves. Kemal, enraged by this rejection, disowns Ayten completely, cutting all ties with her and forcing the young couple to leave their hometown behind. They move to Istanbul to start a new life from scratch. Eighteen years pass. Ayten lives a modest but happy life, content with what little they have. However, she remains unaware of a dark secret: Hikmet, struggling to provide for his family, has become involved in criminal activities. Their daughter, Laçın, grows up resenting the poverty that defines their lives, while their son, Ömer, shows great promise for a brighter future. Tragedy strikes when Hikmet is murdered by his ruthless boss, Tarık, after being caught stealing. Tarık then sets his sights on luring Ömer into the criminal underworld and becomes dangerously obsessed with Ayten. Meanwhile, Laçın falls deeply in love with Hakan, a wealthy young man. Hakan leaves his jealous girlfriend, Pelin, for Laçın but feels unable to marry her due to intense family pressure. Pelin, desperate, fakes a pregnancy to trap Hakan into marriage. Heartbroken, Laçın struggles to rebuild her life, attracting the attention of Selim, a married older man. Yet, her heart still belongs only to Hakan.

Benim İçin Ağlama

Revan lives a peaceful and happy life, married to Salih and blessed with three children. However, she lives under the constant shadow of fear brought on by Perihan, a woman whose young son was accidentally killed by Salih many years ago. Harboring deep resentment, Perihan secretly kidnaps Revan's infant son, Gökhan, and raises him as her own, unaware that Gökhan is actually the twin brother of Revan's beloved daughter, Gülse. Meanwhile, Revan faces another dangerous threat: Aziz, an obsessive man she rejected years earlier, who has never let go of his thirst for revenge. Over time, Aziz's dark plans come to fruition. He orchestrates the murder of Salih and, with the help of the corrupt factory manager Bahri, seizes control of Revan's factory and farm, stripping her of everything. Amidst the chaos, Revan discovers the shocking truth about Gökhan's true identity, finally reuniting with her long-lost son. However, her suffering does not end there. Her family is torn apart by betrayal: Salih's illegitimate daughter Gül seduces Sema's husband, causing devastation; her son Serkan betrays her trust and loses everything in the process; and her daughter Gülse, after a horrific assault orchestrated by Aziz, marries the loyal worker Rifat. Even Revan's sister, Nevra, falls victim to Aziz's manipulation, facing heartbreak. Despite losing everything, Revan finds new hope with Mümtaz, a wealthy and kind-hearted man who helps rebuild her life, only for Mümtaz's brother Cengiz to unleash new tragedies.

Gül, Lale, and Yasemin are three exceptionally close friends who have shared a strong bond since their days at the police academy. Each of them graduated with top honors, proving not only their intelligence and skill but also their determination and resilience. In addition to their remarkable academic achievements, the three young women are known for their beauty, charm, and natural attractiveness. Gül, who comes from a wealthy and independent background, thrives on danger and adventure, constantly seeking out thrills to escape the tensions at home. She struggles with the cold hostility of her stepmother, who is pregnant and resents Gül's presence. Lale, who tragically lost her parents in a devastating plane crash at the tender age of six, now faces harassment and inappropriate advances from her uncle, making her desperate to leave her toxic household. Yasemin, meanwhile, lives entirely alone, battling loneliness and yearning for a sense of belonging. All three young women long for peace, freedom, and a place where they can truly be themselves. Their lives change when Bay Cin, the enigmatic head of a secret government agency, recruits them as new agents due to their outstanding academy performance. Thrilled by the prospect of saving lives, uncovering hidden truths, and living a life full of excitement, they embrace their new roles as Bay Cin's "fairies." However, tragedy strikes when Gül loses her life during a mission and is later replaced by Bahar, another talented and beautiful young woman.

Emel, a strikingly beautiful woman in her late twenties, comes from a modest, middle-class family. Her beauty is impossible to ignore, often drawing admiration and attention from nearly every man she encounters. Living a quiet life in Istanbul with her caring mother and supportive sister, Emel is known for her timid nature, her constant fearfulness, and her emotional fragility, resembling a wounded bird longing for safety. Despite her gentle heart and pure intentions, Emel makes a life-altering decision when she marries Faruk Erođlu, a wealthy and seemingly charming businessman she has only known for two short months. Leaving everything behind, she moves with Faruk to Antalya, hoping to begin a new chapter. However, her dreams quickly crumble. Faruk reveals his true nature: he is pathologically jealous, emotionally and physically abusive, and ruthlessly isolates Emel from her family and friends, cutting off all her ties to the world she once knew. Terrified and trapped, Emel's life takes an even darker turn when she uncovers the horrifying truth – Faruk's first wife died under mysterious and highly suspicious circumstances. Fearing for her own life, Emel bravely devises a plan to fake her death and escape Faruk's clutches. Assuming a new identity as Sevda, she moves to a new city, starts over with a humble job, and for the very first time in her life, experiences true love in the arms of her kind and understanding boss, Cihan.

Süreyya and Merdan are two devoted young workers employed at the grand mansion of the prestigious Mevlütoğlu family, one of the oldest and most respected clans in the historic city of Mardin. Süreyya, in her early twenties, grew up without a mother, shaping her into a smart, strong-willed, dignified, and breathtakingly beautiful young woman. Merdan, around the same age, is a handsome, pure-hearted, and honest young man whose kindness touches everyone around him. Deeply in love with one another, they must keep their relationship hidden from the world, for the master's children themselves have fallen for them. Kenan, the Mevlütoğlu family's only son, harbors an obsessive love for Süreyya, while the daughter, Gülbiye, is dangerously fixated on Merdan. Due to the rigid class differences and fear of retribution, Süreyya and Merdan hide their feelings, knowing their love would never be accepted. However, Kenan and Gülbiye, consumed by jealousy and desire, conspire to tear them apart. Realizing the growing threat, Süreyya persuades Merdan to run away with her. Pretending to help, Kenan deceives them and arranges for a group of smugglers to ambush them at the border. Merdan is gravely wounded, and Süreyya, believing him dead, crosses into Syria, only to be arrested in Aleppo and imprisoned for six long years. While behind bars, she meets a wealthy woman, inherits her fortune, and returns to Mardin as the powerful and unrecognizable Hannan el Salih, determined to seek revenge.

Gülseren is a woman whose malice, cruelty, and cold-heartedness easily rival those of Zinnur, another figure known for her ruthlessness. Yet, there is one key difference that sets Gülseren apart—her immense wealth. With her vast fortune, Gülseren has the power to buy anything and anyone she desires, manipulating people and situations to her advantage with terrifying ease. Her character is so dark, so calculating, that even the devil himself might stand in awe of her wickedness. However, Gülseren's cruelty is not as simple or straightforward as it appears. Beneath her destructive actions and disdainful attitude lies a deep and painful secret—a profound void that nothing seems able to fill. While much of Gülseren's obsession appears to revolve around her brother, Hasan, the truth is far more complicated. Hasan is not the sole object of her fixation. Gülseren is madly, almost desperately, in love with Tamer, a man who is only with her for her money. Blinded by her passion, Gülseren would go to any lengths to keep Tamer by her side, willing to spend her fortune, betray trust, and even sacrifice innocent lives to avoid losing him. When Şerbet and Zinnur enter Hasan's life, the delicate balance Gülseren has maintained begins to shatter, upending everything Hasan once believed to be secure and unchangeable.

Never Forget

Asla Unutma

The story begins on a dilapidated farmhouse, situated in a remote, isolated area far from the bustling city of Istanbul. Kerem, a lively boy around nine years old, lives there with his mother, father, and siblings. The farm is neglected, shabby, and in a state of disrepair, hinting at a life full of hardships. Kerem is especially attached to his baby sister, İpek, who is only ten months old. His gentle care and affection for her reveal his sensitive and loving nature. It becomes clear that the family has not always lived here; they arrived some time ago, seemingly on the run from something—or someone—though the exact reasons remain a mystery. Despite having money, the children cannot understand why they live like nomads, constantly moving and staying in such ruined, forgotten places. One morning, before the sun rises and before anyone else stirs, Kerem sneaks quietly out of the house to play, unaware of how far he strays. When the family wakes and realizes Kerem is missing, panic grips them. Their father furiously scolds everyone, emphasizing that Kerem should never have been left unsupervised. A frantic search begins. As Kerem innocently makes his way home, his parents spot him—and at the same time, they see a convoy of jeeps kicking up dust in the distance. Terror-stricken, they scatter. Urgently, they instruct Emir to hide in an old, abandoned well covered by bushes behind the house. Emir obeys without hesitation.

In the Name of Love

Bir Aşk Uğruna

Set against the dramatic and harrowing backdrop of World War II, the story of the film centers around the intense and deeply emotional inner conflicts of a married woman caught in a heart-wrenching dilemma. In a time when the world is torn apart by violence, fear, and uncertainty, she finds herself facing a personal battle just as fierce as the war raging outside. Bound by duty, loyalty, and the vows she once made, she remains committed to her husband, a man who has stood by her side through times of peace and times of turmoil. Yet, amidst the chaos of a world at war, an unexpected and powerful love blooms. She falls deeply and passionately for another man, someone who awakens feelings she thought had long been buried. Torn between the comfort and familiarity of her marriage and the intoxicating pull of a forbidden love, she struggles to make sense of her emotions. Every decision she faces feels like a betrayal—either to her husband, who represents her past and her promises, or to herself, as she longs for the possibility of true happiness. Her internal struggle mirrors the devastation happening across the globe, making her personal journey one of profound emotional depth. The film explores timeless themes of love, loyalty, betrayal, and the heavy cost of following one's heart during one of the darkest chapters in human history.

The Mole

Köstebek

This is a story woven through a tangled web of intricate relationships, dangerous alliances, and escalating tension, stretching from the polished corridors of politics to the shadowy, hidden corners of the criminal underworld. At first glance, the worlds of politicians and criminals seem starkly different—one cloaked in power and public trust, the other shrouded in fear and secrecy. However, as the story unfolds, it becomes clear that these two realms are deeply interconnected, bound together by ambition, greed, betrayal, and the relentless pursuit of control. Personal relationships, friendships, and family ties are tested as loyalties shift and hidden agendas come to light. Every character, whether seated in the halls of political power or lurking in the shadows of the streets, harbors secrets that, once revealed, threaten to destroy everything they have built. As alliances form and crumble, trust becomes a rare and dangerous commodity. No one is safe, and every decision carries the potential for devastating consequences. Tensions rise steadily, simmering beneath the surface before erupting into inevitable conflict. The lines between right and wrong, law and crime, love and betrayal blur, creating a morally complex and emotionally charged landscape. This is a gripping exploration of how power corrupts, how secrets can destroy, and how the most dangerous enemies are often the ones closest to us.

Each case, with its unique circumstances and hidden layers, contributes to a larger, overarching narrative filled with twists, turns, and unexpected revelations. At the heart of the story lies a relentless pursuit of truth, where every small clue could unravel a greater secret and every shadow could conceal a dangerous lie. The investigators at the center of the story devote themselves with unwavering determination, pushing their limits and risking their lives to uncover the hidden realities lurking beneath the surface. With each case they take on—whether it be a missing person, a baffling murder, a betrayal hidden behind a facade of loyalty, or a conspiracy spanning powerful networks—they piece together fragments of a much larger puzzle. Their journey is not only a physical one through crime scenes, interrogation rooms, and courtrooms, but also a deeply psychological one, navigating through deceit, manipulation, and human frailty. Great efforts are made to break through walls of silence and fear, often revealing shocking truths that challenge their understanding of justice and morality. This is a story where persistence meets danger, and where uncovering hidden secrets becomes not just a mission—but a matter of survival.

Embrace Your Destiny

Gülümse Kaderine

Eda and Yaren are two young girls who have grown up together in the same orphanage in Bursa, finding solace in each other's presence amidst the loneliness of their upbringing. They are not connected by blood, but by the bond of sisterhood they formed out of shared hardships and dreams. Yaren is ambitious and hopeful, nurturing the dream of becoming a doctor one day. She has recently taken the university entrance exam, clinging to the hope that she will be accepted into medical school and finally begin building the future she has long envisioned. Eda, on the other hand, is more disillusioned. Having dropped out of high school, she believes that education is a false promise, one that will not lead her anywhere better. She is determined to survive through her own instincts and street smarts, convinced that the world owes her more than it has given. Now, having both turned eighteen, Eda and Yaren are eager to leave the orphanage behind and carve out independent lives for themselves. However, after attending a seemingly harmless house party, everything changes. Their lives take a dark and tragic turn, setting them on separate yet deeply intertwined paths. As Yaren embarks on a painful journey to uncover the secrets of her hidden past, Eda seizes every crisis as an opportunity, determined to reclaim the fortune she believes life has denied her—by any means necessary.

Ruthless City

Zalim İstanbul

A gripping struggle for existence that stretches from the modest streets of Antakya to the bustling metropolis of Istanbul. At the heart of this struggle stands Seher, a proud and resilient woman who lives in Antakya with her three beloved children. Her life, rooted in traditional values and maternal devotion, revolves around protecting and nurturing her family against all odds. Approaching this struggle from a different angle is Agah Karaçay, a towering figure in the logistics industry, who, like Seher, originally hails from the same hometown. When Seher and Agah Karaçay's paths cross, a journey brimming with long-hidden secrets, moral dilemmas, and emotional tests begins. Seher, an Anatolian woman who proudly declares, "I kneaded their dough with my own hands in my homeland! My children know neither sin nor forbidden ways." Meanwhile, Agah seeks a bride from his hometown for his nephew, who has been confined to a wheelchair since a childhood accident. Through an old acquaintance, an offer reaches Grandmother Neriman, a woman deeply connected to the Karaçay legacy. However, Neriman knows Seher would never accept such an offer willingly. To sway her, Neriman devises intricate schemes, even involving the youngest family members. Behind the glamorous facade of the Karaçay family lies a perilous world of ambition, wealth, secrets, and betrayals. As Seher and her children step into the Karaçay mansion, they unknowingly walk into the greatest test of their lives, one that will shake both families to their very core.

Mrs. Fazilet and Her Daughters

Fazilet Hanım ve Kızları

Fazilet, a determined and ambitious woman who has spent her entire life dreaming of escaping her modest and constrained existence. Having grown up in a small, working-class neighborhood where opportunities are scarce and societal expectations are limiting, Fazilet yearns for wealth, power, and social status, things she believes will finally grant her the respect and admiration she craves. Living with her two daughters, Hazan and Ece, she becomes consumed by the idea that they are her ticket to a better life, particularly focusing her hopes on the beautiful and impressionable Ece. Hazan, the elder daughter, is fiercely independent, strong-willed, and determined to carve her own path without being used as a pawn in her mother's relentless pursuit of status. Working as a fitness trainer, Hazan resents Fazilet's manipulative schemes and openly rebels against her mother's ambitions. Ece, however, is more vulnerable, torn between wanting to please her mother and pursuing her own dreams. Their lives take a dramatic turn when they become entangled with the wealthy and powerful Egemen family, a dynasty harboring its own secrets, ambitions, and deep emotional wounds. As Fazilet relentlessly pushes forward, the two families are drawn into an intricate web of love, betrayal, and revenge, forcing each character to confront painful truths about pride, loyalty, and the real meaning of family.

My Notebook

Not Defteri

As Literature Teacher Mahir Soysal steps through the gates of Dersaadet High School on the first day of the new academic year, he carries more than just lesson plans and textbook, he carries the heavy weight of a shattered past and a desperate hope for redemption. Mahir is not merely beginning a new job; he is seeking a new life, a safe harbor where he can heal old wounds and rediscover a sense of purpose. In the past, Mahir had been a beacon of hope for troubled students, young people whom the rest of the faculty had long since given up on. With patience, wisdom, and unwavering dedication, he had managed to guide these so-called hopeless cases back onto the right path, giving them a second chance at life. However, in the midst of helping others, Mahir's own life was torn apart. Six years ago, while still living in Istanbul, a tragic event unfolded: he lost his beloved son, a loss that devastated him to his core and caused the disintegration of his once-happy family. Now, haunted by guilt and grief, Mahir is determined to embark on two difficult journeys. One is to reconnect with his daughter, Zeynep, who has been kept from him by his ex-wife for years. The other is to once again change the lives of students who have lost all hope for their futures, even as he struggles to rebuild his own.

Lale Devri

This story revolves around the intense and enduring rivalry between two very different families: the Ilgaz family and the Taşkıran family. The Ilgaz family, originating from Kayseri, is deeply traditional and steadily gaining wealth and influence. In contrast, the Taşkıran family, once a proud and aristocratic dynasty rooted in Istanbul's high society, is slowly but inevitably losing its financial power and social standing. At the very heart of this clash stands the passionate and complicated love story between Çınar Ilgaz and Lale Taşkıran, two young people from opposing worlds whose affection for each other defies their families' differences and tensions. Adding further complexity to the narrative is Lale's sister, Yeşim, whose secret and unrequited love for Çınar drives her to jealousy, manipulation, and scheming. Her actions continuously stir trouble, complicating the already fragile ties between the families. As the story progresses and after Lale's emotional departure, a new character named Toprak is introduced. With Toprak's arrival, the plot gains fresh momentum, shifting focus to the hardships, challenges, and resilience she must navigate. Later, following Yeşim's departure from the storyline, another new character, Azra, enters the scene, bringing yet more intrigue. Meanwhile, Zümrüt Taşkıran, determined to avenge the suffering of her daughters, launches a calculated and fierce revenge plot, ensuring that the feud between the families will escalate even further.

After the shocking revelation that Baran is her biological son, Ebru is thrust into an emotional and relentless battle to reclaim him. Overwhelmed by a fierce maternal instinct and years of lost time, Ebru now has a singular, burning goal: to gather all four of her children under one roof and finally leave Halfeti behind, severing the painful ties to a past filled with betrayal and secrets. However, achieving this dream will prove far more difficult than she imagines. Kendal, Narin, and several others, each with their own agendas and grudges, place obstacle after obstacle in her path, determined to keep her from succeeding. While Ebru struggles to reunite with Baran, the son she once mourned as dead, she must also fight to mend the broken bonds with her other scattered children, each carrying their own wounds and resentments. Meanwhile, Kadriye Ana faces a reckoning of her own. Forced to confront the darkest secret she has kept hidden for decades, the very sin that triggered this tangled web of suffering, Kadriye's revelation threatens to upend the fragile foundations of the mansion. At the same time, Kenan carefully advances his meticulously crafted plan for revenge, tightening the noose around Kendal's neck. As tensions reach a boiling point, the battle intensifies, with even the women of the household taking up arms. Ultimately, Kendal is struck down by his greatest and most tragic weakness.

Love Is In the Air

Yer Gök Aşk

Two sisters, each with strikingly different personalities, find themselves entangled in a complicated and passionate love triangle. One sister is gentle, melancholic, and full of quiet longing, while the other is proud, fierce, and unafraid to pursue what she desires. Life teaches that a person can neither escape the bond of blood nor the relentless fire of love burning in their heart. As the story unfolds, the emotional tension between loyalty and longing grows ever stronger. “Those who live with passion cannot stand idly by when it comes to love; the indecisive cannot write their own destiny; the innocent cannot fully reveal themselves; and those who hide their feelings cannot live without breaking.” Set against the breathtaking landscapes of Ürgüp, the narrative takes place within the grand yet haunted halls of the Hancıoğlu Mansion. Here, the two sisters, Havva and Toprak, both fall deeply in love with Yusuf Hancıoğlu, the region’s wealthiest and most powerful man. Their lives, once so closely intertwined, are now divided by the intensity of their feelings for the same man. The story particularly follows Havva’s ambitions, highlighting her clever and often ruthless schemes as she stops at nothing to capture Yusuf’s heart. As emotions clash and loyalties are tested, the bond between the sisters will be pushed to its limits, and the cost of love may be more than any of them can bear.

The Dilbaz family, once proud and rooted in the historic town of Safranbolu, finds themselves forced to leave their beloved hometown due to mounting financial struggles and the desire to secure a better future for their eldest son, Halil, who has been accepted into a university in Istanbul. Filled with hopes and dreams, they move to the bustling, unforgiving city, seeking a fresh start and greater opportunities. However, Istanbul quickly reveals itself to be far harsher than they ever anticipated, confronting them with unexpected hardships and emotional challenges. Halil, focused on his education, finds his relationship with his hometown sweetheart, Esma, strained. Esma, fearful of losing Halil to the fast, seductive pace of city life, clings to the bond they once shared. Meanwhile, Filiz, a wealthy and spoiled classmate of Halil's, enters the picture, stirring feelings of jealousy, insecurity, and tension. Yusuf, the younger son, is more vulnerable to the dangers lurking in the city's darker corners and soon makes choices that lead the family into serious trouble. Perihan, the eldest daughter, adapts with surprising ease, embracing Istanbul with open arms, as if reuniting with a long-lost lover. Meanwhile, back in Safranbolu, Seher remains behind to care for their aging grandparents. But devastating news from their hometown threatens to shake the fragile stability the family is desperately trying to build in their new life.

Diverging Road

Yol Ayrımı

Mazhar Kozanlı is a wealthy, ruthless businessman who built his empire through discipline, power, and fear. He lives by strict principles, believing in control and dominance in both business and personal life. After surviving a life-threatening traffic accident, Mazhar begins to question everything. As he recovers, he realizes the emptiness of his relationships, the emotional cost of his ambition, and the life he has sacrificed for success. Haunted by memories and driven by a need for change, Mazhar starts distancing himself from his former life. His transformation shocks those around him—his children, loyal employees, and even himself—as he begins to reject the values he once imposed. Instead of cold business deals, he turns to compassion; instead of manipulation, he seeks understanding. But redemption doesn't come easily. Mazhar must confront the consequences of a lifetime of harsh decisions, including estranged family bonds and betrayed loyalties. Diverging Road is the story of a man standing at a crossroads, torn between the identity he forged and the humanity he long suppressed. As he chooses a new path, the film explores whether real change is possible when the past is filled with shadows.

The Long Way Home

Eve Dönüş: Sarıkamış 1915

Set against the tragic backdrop of the Sarikamish Operation in 1915, "The Long Way Home" portrays the devastating effects of war on ordinary people. Soldiers and villagers from different backgrounds, each carrying their own dreams and fears, are forced to come together in a desperate struggle for survival. Faced with brutal cold, relentless starvation, and the horrors of endless battles, their hopes of returning home become their sole motivation to endure. As the merciless winter claims more lives day by day, hope becomes a fragile thread. The narrative goes beyond traditional tales of heroism, offering a raw and unfiltered depiction of human endurance, vulnerability, and loss. Through the eyes of its characters, the story captures the grim reality of war, where both nature and the enemy become formidable threats. Despite overwhelming odds, the common human desire to survive and reunite with loved ones binds these individuals together. "The Long Way Home" powerfully conveys the futility and senselessness of war, highlighting the deep emotional and physical scars it leaves behind. The film is a poignant reminder of the resilience of the human spirit and the devastating cost of conflict, portraying not only the historical tragedy but also the universal longing for home, peace, and human connection amidst unimaginable hardship.

Five Minarets in New York

New York'ta Beş Minare

Turkish anti-terror agents arrive in New York City with a clear mission: locate and extradite a dangerous figure known only by the code name “Dajjal”—a man they believe is orchestrating extremist networks from the shadows. With the cooperation of the FBI and NYPD, their investigation leads them to Hadji Gumus, a respected Muslim scholar and devoted family man who years ago fled to the U.S. after serving time for murder in Turkey. Though he has built a quiet life in America, Hadji’s past refuses to stay buried. As the agents close in, tensions rise—not just between nations and agencies, but within hearts and minds. Is Hadji truly the man they seek, or a scapegoat caught in a larger web of suspicion, fear, and political pressure? Dajjal becomes more than a man; he is a symbol of vengeance, and the story unravels into a profound examination of justice, faith, and identity. At its core, this is a story about perception—how love, prejudice, and loyalty can blur the line between guilt and innocence. In a world desperate for answers, the truth may be less important than the desire to punish, and not all battles are fought with guns.

I Saw The Sun

Güneşi Gordüm

“I Saw The Sun” follows the emotional and physical journey of a family living in a small Eastern Anatolian village, forced to migrate westward due to ongoing conflict and terrorism. Seeking safety and a better future, they embark on a grueling journey that becomes a profound test of resilience, endurance, and emotional strength. Along the way, they face separation, profound loss, and intense struggles with their identities. Each family member experiences the migration differently, shaped by their personal dreams, fears, and memories of the home they left behind. Although they eventually settle in different cities, the emotional scars of displacement linger, affecting their sense of belonging and shaping their future choices. The film poignantly explores the deep and lasting impact of forced migration on personal identity, familial bonds, and the universal search for stability and meaning. “I Saw The Sun” portrays not only the physical hardships of migration but also the internal battles individuals face when uprooted from everything familiar. Through moments of despair and resilience, the story reveals the enduring hope for a better life and the unbreakable strength of the human spirit. It is a touching narrative about loss, adaptation, and the painful but necessary pursuit of new beginnings when life leaves no other choice.

White Angel

Beyaz Melek

Ahmet, an elderly man diagnosed with a terminal illness, is moved into a nursing home by his caring but overwhelmed son and daughter, who believe he will receive better care there. Though initially reluctant, Ahmet soon begins to settle into his new environment. He forms unexpected and heartfelt connections with the other elderly residents, each with their own stories, regrets, and hopes. Within the walls of the home, Ahmet discovers not just companionship, but also friendship, love, and a renewed zest for life. Shared meals, conversations, and quiet moments blossom into bonds that give the residents a sense of dignity and joy they feared they had lost. As Ahmet's health continues to decline, his newfound relationships bring him peace and purpose. "White Angel" delicately explores themes of aging, loneliness, and the evolving nature of family bonds. It shows that the later stages of life can still hold profound meaning and beauty, despite physical decline. Through the experiences of Ahmet and his companions, the film reminds viewers that love and connection are timeless. The story celebrates life in its twilight years, portraying aging not as an end, but as a stage where warmth, hope, and humanity can still thrive.

The Hell of Boomerang

Bumerang Cehennem

In the rugged and volatile lands of Southeastern Anatolia, a long-standing blood feud between two rival clans intensifies, evolving into a multi-generational war. What begins as a minor incident fueled by pride and honor soon escalates into a chain of retaliations that neither side can escape. As the conflict deepens, the lines between right and wrong blur, and entire families become consumed by vengeance. Innocent lives, including women and children, are caught in the ever-expanding crossfire. Amidst the violence and chaos, a forbidden love emerges between two young individuals—each from opposing clans. Their love, pure and sincere, offers a fragile hope for peace, yet it is crushed under the weight of tradition and family pressure. Their struggle mirrors the larger conflict, where forgiveness is feared, and hatred is inherited. “The Hell of Boomerang” is a powerful reflection on the destructive cycle of revenge and how it poisons communities from within. The story examines how deeply rooted beliefs in honor can blind entire generations, leading to endless suffering. It underscores the desperate need for reconciliation, peace, and the courage to break free from inherited hatred. Ultimately, the film is a haunting reminder that without forgiveness, history will continue to repeat itself in blood.

Love, Now!

Aşk Oluversin Gari

When renowned archaeologist Guneş returns to the tranquil coastal village of Sahilkoy, he's met with troubling news—his father, Salih, a ruthless businessman, is preparing to build a luxury hotel on what may be sacred historical ground. Determined to protect the land's hidden legacy, Guneş begins a quiet investigation, unearthing clues that point to the existence of an ancient, long-lost city buried beneath the soil. Along the way, he crosses paths with Derya, a passionate local activist who has dedicated her life to preserving Sahilkoy's cultural and natural heritage. As sparks fly between them, Guneş finds himself torn between his growing affection for Derya and the shadow of his complicated past—especially when Seda, his ambitious ex-girlfriend, unexpectedly reenters his life. Tensions rise in Sahilkoy as treasure hunters swarm the village and local loyalties fracture. Some residents are lured by promises of wealth and progress, while others stand firm against the looming destruction. Salih, desperate to push forward with his project, is willing to use bribery and deceit to get what he wants—but the revelation of Guneş's involvement throws his plans into chaos. Caught between love, loyalty, and legacy, Guneş must make a choice that could reshape both his future and Sahilkoy's fate forever.

Deniz is home after her surgery. Sadri and Hatice talk to Derya in the garden. They explain the situation. Derya tells them that nothing has changed, that they are still her parents. Meanwhile, Guney continues to work on the dig site. The village barber Erdem and Ismet suspect that he's looking for treasure, so they constantly follow him. Seda arrives, the two leave, thinking they are on a date. Sadri visits Salih at the hotel. Salih asks Sadri to keep his daughter away from Guney. He tells him that Guney has had many other girlfriends in other towns, and that he always left them high and dry. Sadri leaves the hotel, angry. Then he sees Guney saying "hi" to two women in front of the hotel. Having no clue about what is going on, Guney is getting ready to propose to Derya, and he asks Deniz for advice. Derya goes to talk to Guney. But she gets angry and leaves when she sees Seda hugging Guney. Once again, Guney tells Seda that he doesn't want her, that he is in love with Derya. Seda starts crying and calls her father. Ismail takes the flash drives and comes to Sahilkoy. He checks into the hotel that Salih is staying in. He continues to threaten Salih. Meanwhile, Sadri and his assistant Alis continue to try and convince the villagers to support the construction of the hotel. First, Fahri and his cousins agree to sell their land. Ismail meets Seda at the hotel. Seda notices the flash drives among his father's things. She sees Salih's name written on them. She takes one and watches the footage on it. It is the video where Salih points the gun at Nihat. Seda doesn't really understand what she's seeing or who's standing in front of Salih. So she decides to show it to Alis. Alis watches the video and secretly takes pictures. He tells Sadri about it. Sadri gets his gun and goes to the hotel to confront him. Meanwhile, Deniz tells Guney to propose on Strawberry Hill. Guney agrees. Deniz tells Derya a white lie, that Guney has found the stone, and that she should go to Strawberry Hill. Sadri arrives at the hotel. Guney has just talked to his father, and he sees Sadri on his way out. Sadri pulls out his gun and tells him to leave town before the next morning. Guney goes to Strawberry Hill. Sadri confronts Salih. And Guney proposes to Derya.

The Mystery

Sir

Ferhan and Gülcan, a couple whose marriage has weathered many ups and downs, decide to celebrate their wedding anniversary at a luxurious hotel, hoping to rekindle the romance that once defined their relationship. However, what begins as a hopeful evening quickly turns sour. During their celebration, a heated argument breaks out between them, fueled by lingering resentments and unspoken frustrations. In a fit of anger and hurt, Gülcan storms out of the hotel, leaving Ferhan alone to grapple with the emotional fallout of their fight. Later that same night, Ferhan becomes entangled in an even darker confrontation— this time with his secret lover, a woman whose existence he had carefully hidden from everyone, including Gülcan. The argument escalates violently, and in the midst of their quarrel, Ferhan is murdered. The shocking crime sends ripples through the hotel and beyond. The only person who witnesses part of what transpired is a hotel staff member, someone who holds crucial but incomplete information. Unfortunately for Gülcan, all the circumstantial evidence—their public fight, her sudden disappearance, and her connection to the victim—seems to point directly at her, casting her as the prime suspect in her husband's murder. As suspicions mount and the investigation intensifies, Gülcan must fight to prove her innocence while untangling the deeper betrayals that led to tragedy.

The Other Side

Öteki Taraf

A man lives a peaceful, orderly, and loving life with his girlfriend Ece. Their home is not just a physical space but also a concrete reflection of trust, love, and sharing. But a name from the past shatters this harmony: Sara. The man's ex-girlfriend reenters their lives with an enticing job offer. This offer is not just a professional matter; it also disrupts the delicate balance of their relationship. One morning, Ece suddenly disappears. Her farewell video and the traces she leaves behind in the house create deep suspicion and confusion in the man's mind. Trapped between reality and illusion, past and present, he begins to lose his grip on sanity while trying to understand Ece's disappearance. Torn between Sara's presence and Ece's absence, life turns into an unsolvable puzzle for him. The Other Side offers much more than a seemingly simple love triangle—it is a psychological thriller woven with suppressed emotions and the inevitability of confronting truth, exploring the dark corridors of the subconscious. It draws the audience into a gripping story that questions what is real and what is fiction.

Byzantine Games

Bizans Oyunlari

The Mayans, migrating from South America, settle in Anatolia and merge with the Turkish tribes, forming a new civilization. This unique formation is not only culturally but also politically and historically significant. However, the Byzantine Empire takes notice. Although Emperor Klitor III desires peace and order in the region, the dark intrigues within the palace thwart this aim. The rising unity and harmony in Anatolia ignite internal power struggles within Byzantium. Intriguing members of the court begin to devise intervention plans to protect their own political interests. As various traps are set for the new society formed by the Mayans and Turks, our heroes embark on a journey that is both comical and epic. A parody of both history and the modern day, Byzantine Games offers a laugh-filled adventure with its absurd take on historical events. It humorously explores cultural identity clashes and cleverly satirizes contemporary political structures. With its entertaining characters, absurd dialogues, and striking atmosphere, the film delivers a memorable experience filled with historical and societal satire.

Overwhelmed by the pressures and burden of fame, three young men experience a deep psychological breakdown. Lost in the emptiness and meaninglessness of life, they check themselves into a therapy clinic as a last resort. But this clinic is far from conventional; it offers an alternative treatment program that focuses more on spiritual balance and inner transformation than traditional medicine. The clinic is run by the unconventional Hidayet Hanım, who, with her sharp intuition and maternal wisdom, acts both as a guide and a caregiver to her patients. Although initially resistant, the young men slowly begin to bond—with each other and with the other patients in the clinic. Each hides their pain behind a different mask, yet all of them share the same need: to be understood, loved, and forgiven. In this process, filled with absurd, humorous, and at times emotional moments, they confront their pasts and begin to redefine their futures. Boo! is a character-driven dramedy that blends satire with an exploration of the emotional void behind fame and the journey toward psychological healing. It portrays the fragility and resilience of the human spirit through both laughter and sorrow.

Homeland

Memleket

In a house perched on the hillside of a flooded Anatolian village, Mehmet Pehlivan lives with his wife, Koca Nene, and their granddaughter Narhanım. Time moves slowly for this small family, where the memories of the past and the stillness of the present intertwine. Their home is one of the few structures that survived after the village was submerged. Narhanım, who lost her parents at a young age, was raised by her grandfather and grandmother. Their intergenerational life is simple, close to nature, and deeply meaningful. One day, however, a thief breaks into their home, disturbing their peaceful existence. More than just possessions seem to be stolen—memories carefully guarded for years also feel violated. This incident ripples through the family's inner world. Mehmet Pehlivan's confrontation with the past, Koca Nene's resilience, and Narhanım's dreams for the future all begin to shift and take on new forms. Homeland is a simple yet powerful film that explores the strength of family bonds and the depth of reckoning with the past amid the silence of nature. In this story where memories, belonging, and the passage of time are intertwined, a home becomes more than four walls—it becomes a silent witness to an entire life. The film invites viewers on a journey that is both emotional and contemplative.

Leyla and İskender are two lonely souls carrying deep wounds from the past, both in search of a second chance at love. Leyla has severed ties with her family and is trying to build a life on her own. İskender is burdened by the mistakes of his past and seeking a fresh start. These two strangers meet at a turning point in life and quickly form a powerful bond. Their love brings a sense of happiness and wholeness neither of them has felt in a long time. But life has other plans. A devastating truth about İskender's past emerges—one that threatens their future together. Their love gradually becomes a test of sacrifice and acceptance. You Are My Home tells not only a story of love but also the challenges of forgiveness, letting go, and starting over. The film shows how love can live within the walls of a home—a place where two hearts beat as one. With its emotional depth, simple narrative, and powerful ending, this story touches the heart and reminds us that love is not just about being together, but about weathering life's storms together.

The Turks Must Be Crazy

Türkler Çıldırılmış Olmalı

A colorful and eclectic group of characters from all across Turkey is brought together by the government for a top-secret mission: rescuing Turkish hostages in Somalia. However, this team is far from professionally trained—they are a ragtag bunch of civilians including former civil servants, unemployed youth, small-town folks, and wildly different personalities. Each character is quirky, humorous, and unique in their own way. Initially completely incompatible, the group eventually bonds and begins to work together with a sense of duty. Their journey, of course, is filled with mishaps, unexpected events, and plenty of laughs. The Turks Must Be Crazy blends action and comedy while carrying a humorous sense of patriotism. The film shows how ordinary people can become extraordinary heroes when faced with great challenges. With its exaggerated character types and absurd plot twists, the story delivers a caricatured yet heartfelt hero's journey. It's a film that will make viewers laugh, gasp, and feel a sense of pride all at once.

The Messenger

Ulak

A mysterious stranger arrives in a remote Anatolian village and begins telling the villagers stories about the past. Introducing himself as Zekeriya, he never reveals where he came from or who he really is. Yet his tales deeply shake the ordinary lives of the villagers. Zekeriya's words touch not only the ears of those who listen but also the soul of the village itself. His story tells of a village, a messenger, and a transformation. Through this tale, each villager begins an internal reckoning—some with their sins, others with their hopes. Zekeriya's presence evokes both fear and curiosity. As the lines between truth and fiction blur, each villager starts to question their own life through the lens of the stories told. The Messenger is a timeless narrative that centers on the transformative power of storytelling and speech. The film explores how reality and imagination, past and present, can intertwine. Built on themes of belief, fear, and hope, it invites the audience on both a visual and intellectual journey. The Messenger reminds us that stories aren't just meant to be told—they exist to heal, change, and transform.

Ottoman Republic

Osmanlı Cumhuriyeti

The year is 2007. The Ottoman Empire never collapsed—it still stands. While Turkey searches for its cultural and political identity in the modern world, the country continues to be ruled by a monarchy. Sultan Osman VII is a progressive yet indecisive leader attempting to align with the Western world. Within the palace, tradition struggles to keep up with technological developments; the sudden introduction of the internet, television, and mobile phones shocks the Ottoman court, throwing them headfirst into the chaos of modern life. The people find themselves caught between traditional structures and modernization. Absurd dialogues unfold among palace officials, bureaucrats, and citizens, while the clash between modern institutions and the Ottoman system leads to a string of comical events. The Ottoman Republic is a satirical political comedy built on an alternative timeline where history took a different path. With a humorous tone, it explores the contradictions between outdated systems and contemporary dynamics, while playfully asking the question, “What if?” Walking the line between tradition and modernity, the film offers sharp observations about the present through historical fiction.

Mrs. Salkim's Diamonds

Salkim Hanım'ın Taneleri

Set in 1940s Turkey, this story unfolds against the backdrop of a society shaped by war and political turmoil. At its heart lies the tragic impact of the Wealth Tax, imposed on non-Muslims. Gabriyel is a successful and respected businessman, but the new law upends his life. Stripped of all his assets and pushed to the margins of society, he faces deep injustice. Meanwhile, his relative Halit is a bureaucrat who has successfully integrated into the system. Halit's wife, Nora, tries to make sense of the events around her while confronting her own family history. The film delves into the moral dilemmas, ethical questions, and inner reckonings faced by each character. Mrs. Salkim's Diamonds is a powerful drama that brings to life a painful chapter of Turkey's recent history through personal stories. It doesn't just depict a tax policy, but explores themes of discrimination, conscience, and human dignity. The characters' confrontations with the past offer a sobering reflection on both history and human nature—touching the audience with a story of loss, resilience, and the enduring struggle for justice.

That's Who We Are

Biz Böyleyiz

Once an inseparable group of childhood friends, a close-knit circle reunites years later. Despite time and distance, their bond still lingers. The reason for their reunion is bittersweet: their beloved Aunt Nezihe's health is deteriorating. Her home holds the memories of laughter and tears they once shared. But time has changed everyone. Each has gone down different paths, faced different joys and sorrows. What begins as a reunion becomes a moment of reckoning for each of them. Old wounds resurface, repressed feelings emerge, and past love confessions come to light. That's Just Who We Are is a nostalgic and emotional drama that explores friendship, loyalty, growing up, and the inevitability of change. As each character confronts their past and present, the film reveals how friendships evolve over time. With sincere dialogue, heartfelt characters, and touching moments, it both entertains and reflects. People may change, but shared memories and bonds from the heart never truly fade.

Crazy Dumrul

Deli Dumrul

One of the most iconic characters in Turkish folk literature returns to the screen in a modern retelling. Crazy Dumrul brings new life to the legendary hero in a contemporary setting. Brave, blunt, and impulsive, Dumrul finds himself at the center of both comedic and tragic events as he fights against evil. The story weaves themes of death, love, friendship, and heroism, blending the core values of folk tales with a modern sense of humor. Dumrul's journey begins with a scheme involving a toll-free bridge he builds, daring to challenge even God by questioning, "What is death, anyway?" His defiance leads him to a direct confrontation with the Angel of Death. Willing to fight for the woman he loves, Dumrul's epic adventure becomes a test of courage and devotion. Crazy Dumrul combines the enchantment of traditional legends with contemporary comedy, appealing to both nostalgic and modern audiences. What begins with laughter ends in emotional reflection—raising timeless questions: What is life? What is death? And is love truly beyond all else?
